

Working with links

Links are created using the  element which has an attribute called href.

When you link to a different website, the value of the href attribute will be the full web address for the site, which is known as an “absolute” url.

When you are linking to other pages within the same site, you do not need to specify the domain name in the url. You can use shorthand known as “relative” url.

Opening links in a New Window

The target attribute is used to open a link in a new window.

The target attribute with value (“_blank”)
